

You are cordially invited to a special preview of

The magic of Hanji

An exhibition by Jeong, Eun Hee of aesthetic and functional products made of traditional Hanji paper from Korea.

Hanji is the name for Korean traditional paper made from bark of mulberry trees. Jeong Eun Hee's creates handmade paper of various textures using a traditional technique called Jumchy that draws upon the malleable physical properties of Hanji. The resultant paper, which looks fragile, almost ethereal, is in fact, amazingly resilient making it a very versatile medium for creating products that are both aesthetic and functional. For Jeong Eun Hee, the process of making Hanji is as enjoyable as the process of using Hanji creatively to make a finished product.

The exhibition displays products made with Hanji paper. The intricate traditional art of stitching is also employed to produce delicate and aesthetically pleasing products that could enhance any contemporary setting. As such, the exhibition examines the contemporary relevance of tradition.
